Leadership Vision for 2023

Top 3 Strategic Priorities for
Chief Audit Executives

Leadership Vision for CAE Leaders in 2023

What are the chief audit executive (CAE) top priorities for 2023? And how do your organization's compare?

As we head into the new year, organizations are facing a growing mix of trends. From the uncertain global economy to a tight talent market, supply chain disruption, increasing regulatory pressure and shifting customer expectations, these substantial and often interconnected trends create new risks to the enterprise.

CAEs can help meet these challenges by providing assurance over a wider and more difficult range of risks and supplying the critical cross-functional perspective needed to prepare for what's ahead.

Use this research to help answer three questions that are key for CAE leadership in 2023 and beyond.

Key questions addressed:

1. What are the major trends affecting CAEs?
2. What are CAEs' top priorities?
3. What actions should CAEs take now to be successful?

Key Challenges Requiring Chief Audit Executive Leadership in 2023

1

Audit Planning and Risk Coverage Complexity

On average, auditors feel that 22% of audit hours should be allocated differently to cover the most important risks to the organization.

2

Developing the Auditor of the Future

A vast majority (79%) of CAEs say the range of areas in which audit departments must have subject matter expertise has broadened.

3

Raising the Strategic Level of the Audit Department and the CAE

Fifty percent of CAEs report their audit committees are increasing expectations for them to demonstrate impact on the broader organization.

Challenge: Risk Assessment and Audit Planning Processes Are Slow to Evolve

Shortcomings of Audit's Current Audit Planning Processes

Annual-Based
Audit Planning
Processes

Most audit planning still happens on an annual basis. Only 13% perform quarterly updates and 18% perform continuous updates.

Limited Use of Data Analytics in Audit Planning

Only 38% of audit departments use data analytics in department-level audit planning, and only half leverage continuous monitoring.

Limited
Coordination in Risk Assessments

Seventy-four percent of CAEs report risk assessment is an area where risk and assurance functions can better share resources.

Recommended Actions

- Improve audit's ability to dynamically deploy resources in order to assess areas of high risk.
- Improve audit's ability to build subject matter expertise within its team by architecting learning opportunities.
- Position the audit department more strategically by educating stakeholders of the two key roles of audit: increasing confidence and reducing uncertainty.
- Provide oversight to the board and options to senior management for the overall risk governance model and its appropriate intensity for different risks.
